

Growing together

■ Amanda Lewis

Husband-and-wife team Tom and Gabby Ferolla are a dynamic duo not only in life but also in the building game.

Drawing on more than 35 years of combined building industry experience, their company Promenade Construction specialises in turnkey, high-specification unit developments in addition to custom-built homes up to $1 million.

Mrs Ferolla said her husband followed his family's footsteps into the plastering trade before obtaining his builder's registration and forming Promenade Construction in 2009.

She said the pair decided to set up their own company because of their combined love of the industry and to also have the ability to create something from nothing.

"Tom's invaluable hands-on experience together with his keen eye for detail, ensures Promenade Construction delivers uncompromising quality for its clients," Mrs Ferolla, who aside from being the office manager also helped clients with their interior selections, said.

Promenade Construction specialises in custom-built homes.

They considered their award-winning company to be a full-service builder, undertaking everything from contour surveys, site plans, obtaining approvals and liaising with designers to the build.

"We endeavour to make the entire process as smooth as possible, taking care of all the laborious tasks that clients may not have the time, nor the inclination, to do themselves," she said.

Mrs Ferolla said every Promenade home was constructed as if it was their own and each client could expect great value for money.

"To give you a colloquial term, we give clients a lot of bang for their buck — our standard specifications are very high and we include many items that are usually extras with other builders," she said.

"Also, our quality is excellent. Tom is extremely fussy and has a very keen eye for detail.

"He uses the same team of tradespeople across all our building projects and most of them have been working for us since our inception."
